A SUPPLEMENT to an Act, entituled "An Act for "an impost on goods, wares and merchandize, import- "ed into this State."

WHEREAS the intention of the Act, entituled "An "Act for an impost on goods, wares and merchandize, "imported into this State," to which this act is a supplement, may be evaded, by bringing or importing goods, wares and merchandize by land, whereby many evil consequences may arise: For remedy whereof,

Be it enacted, and it is hereby enacted by the Representatives of the Freemen of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in General Assembly met, and by the authority of the same, That from and after the passing of this act, there shall be raised and collected upon all goods, wares and merchandize brought into this State by land, each and every of the duties mentioned and set forth in the act to which this act is a Supplement, and all the powers and authorities, and the penalties, regulations and directions, given and expressed in and by the said act, shall be, and they are hereby extended to enforce the collection of the duties hereby imposed and laid, as fully and amply to all intents and purposes, as if the same were herein repeated and enumerated.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the owner, factor or consignee of any goods, wares or merchandize, made dutiable by the act to which this act is a supplement, shall, within twenty-four hours after their arrival, enter the same with the Naval Officer of the city of Philadelphia, or with one of his Deputies, and specify the packages, marks and numbers thereof, and the nature and quantity of their contents, in number, weight and measure, as they are commonly counted, estimated and sold.

Provided always, and be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That on the arrival of such goods, wares or merchandize, in any borough, township or district, where there may be no Deputy of the Naval-Officer, then, and in such case, the owner, consignee or factor, shall make entry as aforesaid with the next Justice of the Peace, who is hereby authorised and required to proceed and act in the manner and form as the Naval-Officer or his Deputy are empowered and required to act.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That if any owner, factor or consignee, shall unload, or cause to be unloaded any of such goods, wares or merchandize, from any waggon, cart, dray, stage-coach, or other conveyance, before entry made as aforesaid, and having obtained a permit for so doing, every person so offending shall forfeit the sum of One Hundred Pounds, and all goods, wares and merchandize so unloaded, or the value thereof; and the goods shall be seized by the said Naval-Officer, his Deputy, or Justice of the Peace herein before empowered and required to act, who also may cause such seizure to be made by the Constable of such borough, township or district.

And be it enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the duties imposed hereby, and by the act to which this act is a supplement, shall be paid into the Treasury of this State for the support of government, any thing in the twenty-third section of the last mentioned act to the contrary notwithstanding.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That the duties imposed and laid by this act, and the act to which this act is a supplement, shall continue until that part of the resolve of Congress of the eighteenth of April last, which hath respect to duties on imported goods, be acceded to by each and every of the Thirteen United States, and from thence to the end of the next sitting of the Assembly, and no longer.

Provided always, and be it enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That it shall and may be lawful for any person or persons importing goods, wares or merchandize into this State, to enter the same for exportation, and to lodge them in any safe store or warehouse, whereof the Naval-Officer shall keep one key, and the importer another; and in case the said goods or any part of them shall be exported within four months from the time of entry, no part of the duty or impost on the goods so exported shall be due or payable:

Provided always, That the exportation shall be made in vessels having registers, and shall be landed at some port without the capes of Delaware; and provided the exporter enters into bonds with sufficient security to the amount of the value of the goods so exported, that they or any part of them shall not be relanded at any place within this State, and shall, within twelve months from the time of giving such bond, produce to the Naval-Officer, a Certificate from the Naval Officer of the port where such goods shall be landed, or if there is no Naval-Officer, from some Magistrate, who shall certify the delivery there; and if any person shall neglect or refuse to produce such Certificate, within the time and in the manner aforesaid, he shall be subject to the penalty expressed in his bond.

AND WHEREAS it may happen to be inconvenient to the importers of goods in some cases to enter them for exportation, and it may nevertheless happen that goods which may be imported, and the duty whereof may be paid or secured, will be exported:

Be it enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That in all cases where any goods, wares or merchandize, charged with an impost or duty by this act, or the act to which this is a Supplement, shall or may be imported from and after the passing of this act, and shall be exported within the time and under the conditions already expressed in this act, the whole of the said duty (if before paid) shall be returned within one month after exportation, or if bonded, it shall be allowed out of such bond.

Provided nevertheless, That no goods, wares or merchandize, of the manufacture of any part of Europe, or of the East-Indies, of which the duties have been so paid or secured, shall be entitled to a return of the said duty or impost, except they shall remain in the packages in which they were originally imported, and shall be of the value of One Hundred Pounds, or upwards.

Southwark, Sept. 9. § JOSEPH CASSIN.

To GEORGE BRYAN, Esq; one of the Assistant Justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

AS you are in an awkward situation, I know not how to address you. Should you be stiled Judge, the men of the law might with propriety challenge the appellation as a misnomer; if Sir, your levelling principles would recoil at the title; and if Honorable, the honest part of the world would suppose I dealt in irony. Let the men of the law cavil as they please, you think what you choose, or the world what their honesty may dictate, I must do justice to myself, by simply addressing you with---Grave Sir, are you now employed in writing another Freeholder? You seem to be fond of this signature, as being the most suitable to prevent the discovery of its author.

That you are and have been a party-man a number of years, no unprejudiced person will hesitate to pronounce. You have endeavoured to serve the cause of two men, equally attached to you for doing their business. Should I name your task-masters, perhaps the dead may suffer in comparison with the living. Be that as it may, let the world be furnished with them. I mean the late Mr. Allen, and the disfranchized Caffius. Knowing ones will immediately pronounce, that the man, who could serve both in their different views and projects, must have diversity of talents. Mistake not, nothing easier than to work from a pattern, be it under proprietary influence and guidance, by writing as you did formerly to exempt their property from the payment of equal taxes with that of their tenants, the good people of this country, and that the holding of commissions of honor or profit by the slippery tenure of their will was the essence of a free government---or, as you do at this time, by labouring to make your pale-faced friend sensible, brave and honest. "Hic labor, hoc opus est."

In such services you have failed. You have lived to see the downfall of that influence which arose from wealth and connection, and which formed a compact body against the real complaints of the people, and your base friend obtunded in his intellects by the avenging hand of a just God.---See him faultering at the bar, the derision of his own party, and the laughing-stock of the High Court of Errors and Appeals. Thus is your hero fallen from the first appointment in government to the low rank of a quacking Solicitor. His incapacity, both intellectual and political, mark him as an object of pity, and his long wished for situation is now thoroughly compleated, by his being mixed with the mass of the people;---there may he remain, forgetting and forgot!

With this connection, and with this weight of character, your friends, desirous to distinguish virtue and reward merit, hold you up as their champion. Judge Bryan Censor for the city of Philadelphia! Hinc illæ Lachrymæ.---Without one foot of property therein, attached to it by no ties save those of a disjointed faction, allured by no motives but the spirit of disappointed ambition, steady and persevering by no gripe but that of poverty, you are to represent the metropolis of America in the grand Council of Censors! Has this country a character to lose? If she has, I tremble at your appointment!

The duty of this grand Council is pointed out in the 47th section of the constitution. "They shall meet together on the second Monday of November in the year 1783, a majority of whom shall be a quorum in every case, except as to calling a Convention, in which two thirds of the whole number elected shall agree, and whose duty it shall be---to enquire whether the constitution has been preserved inviolate in every part, and whether the legislative and executive branches of government have performed their duty as guardians of the people, or assumed to themselves or exercised greater or other powers than they are entitled to by the constitution.---They are also to enquire whether the public taxes have been justly laid and collected in all parts of this Commonwealth-----In what manner the public monies have been disposed of---and whether the laws have been duly executed. For this purpose, they shall have power to send for persons or papers, shall have authority to pass public censures, to order impeachments, and to recommend to the Legislature the repealing such laws as appear to them to have been enacted contrary to the principles of the constitution." And gives further powers, such as to call a Convention, &c. &c.

How unprejudiced you will be for this office, it will be necessary to consider your conduct with respect to the different duties enjoined by this section.---Whether the constitution has been preserved inviolate, involves a question with respect to the legislative and executive branches. This being premised, no position more evident, than that no person can with justice be a Judge in his own cause. The infirmities of human nature, the principles of self-preservation, teach us to think mercifully of ourselves, especially when an adjudication in our favour would save our lives, and the reverse would call the vengeance of a justly enraged country against us. In public offices, which have been filled by non-jurors and aspiring villains, parsimonious of their own and lavish of the public pelf, how difficult to drag offenders to justice, if persons, parties in crimes and participators of the revenues of the country with them, are to decide on the conduct of each other. Have not you, Grave Sir, been an Assemblyman, and a Vice-President of this State, since the revolution? Was you not of that chosen few, that band of brothers, appointed at Lancaster, who, without judge or jury, had powers to sequester and confiscate, to imprison, and forfeit life at pleasure, not accountable to any power on earth for your decrees? and are you not now a Judge of the Supreme Court? Have you not been one of those parricides, who, by your artifice, exempted the back counties of this State from the payment of the public taxes, and of course laid heavy burthens upon the city and county of Philadelphia? Being without property, not one farthing thereof do you pay. Have you not wrote in the Freeman's Journal against the five per cent. impost, by which means near a million of dollars has been lost to this State since last winter? This money would have arisen from the pockets of foreigners (who now engross our trade, and are daily taking our silver money from us) and not from the merchants resident with us.

Why this spirit, but to ruin our commerce, embarrass the arrangements of the Financier-General, and contravene the grand Councils of the United States? Who wrote those resolves, which were rejected at the last meeting of the Assembly by a decided majority, as a trick to ingratiate your party with the army, by endeavouring to keep for their use monies, which in that very House, the week before, had been appropriated under Continental requisitions? Such resolutions tend to weaken the Confederation, and to set rule and good order afloat. Who laid the embargoes on the Pennsylvania trade during the war, but you and your friend Caffius? Who has stood behind the curtain, prompting several members of the Assembly against the brave and hardy veterans of the Pennsylvania line? Who has encouraged prosecutions against officers of that respectable body? Who has treated them with insolence from the bench, when they were unable to retort? Thus circumstanced, let me ask you candidly----Can you with any face, and unblushing, pass censures, order impeachments, and recommend the repeal of laws enacted contrary to the spirit of the constitution? As soon shall the leopard change his spots, or the Delaware roll back to its source.

These traits mark your political character, and apply rather to the malignity of your heart, than the deficiency of your head. As to them both, we must, to form some judgment thereof, pursue you to the busy scene of mercantile life, in which you groped near fifteen years in this city in the Irish trade, now and then turning smuggler. A number of merchants employed you as a fit hand for this dark business, your hypocrisy and cant pointing you out as a fit character to go through the same without suspicion, and your want of principle and matchless effrontery to sell the smuggled property under price, and by this means defraud the fair trader of his honest gains. Honesty is the best policy.---In the course of a few years you failed, your genius leading you more to huddle up lumber in the store-room of your memory, than attend to the ledger, or furnish your ware-house with merchandize. You were frequently found in the Swedes Church burying-ground, decyphering and getting by rote antique inscriptions on tomb-stones, when your creditors were pressing at your door for the payment of their just dues.

On your return from the Congress at New-York in 1765, it was remarked that you could give a much better account of the Roberts and the Phils, with their several distinctions, i. e. the different branches of the Livingston family, and the amount of the rent-rolls of their manors, and of the number of the pews in Trinity church, than of the insidious behaviour of Brigadier Ruggles, the approved and firm conduct of Mr. Dickinson and Judge M'Kean, or the designated oppression of the stamp-act. Shortly after this period, you were placed by the late government in the commission of the peace for the city and county of Philadelphia. Here you vended your warrants as the toy-man does his small ware, but to another purpose. You scattered your petty vengeance through the Southern Liberties of the city, and many a poor wretch has been by your merciless hand thrust into a dreary prison, whose wife and children have become immediate objects of public bounty.

With this catalogue of moral and political acquirements, you are to be chosen a Censor. Forbid it, Philadelphia, that a man, who has neither the good of the community at heart, sentiments of religion or morality to dictate to him, or an unclouded understanding to be his guide, deeply involved in the enraged politics of a faction, who has stood the enemy of your trade, has been the encourager of the heavy taxes with which you have been particularly burthened, should be your choice.

Hic niger est, hunc tu Romane caveto!

A DAY SCHOOL,

Just opened, all for young LADIES, by

JOHN BEARD,

In Pewter-Platter-Alley, in a convenient room, and every thing in excellent order for said school---where they may be taught

READING, Writing and Arithmetic, and the English Grammar grammatically, and be taught to spell every day off the book, and be made to know the meaning and signification of every word they spell. He will take but twenty-five scholars, and he thinks he will be able to learn so small a number more in one quarter than they would learn in a year at a school where there is sixty or seventy, as he will have so much time to attend them, and do the height of justice to each scholar; they must be well recommended before he will admit them to school.

Also, an EVENING SCHOOL will be kept throughout the winter, for young MEN that are engaged in business in the day, where they may be taught any branches of Arithmetic or the Mathematics they please, also Reading, Writing and Spelling, &c.

He likewise sells Dutch Quills of all sorts, as cheap again as any in this city; he will sell them by the single quarter for one shilling, which they cannot get of the same quality in the city for less than two shillings or half a crown. ‖ Oct. 7.

To be SOLD by the Subscriber,

NEAR Bohemia Ferry and Sassafras Neck, Cæcil County, State of Maryland, a compact level FARM, divided from the one he lives on by a main road, containing about 200 acres; near 30 of which is woodland. The residue has been divided in three fields; part of the woodland in each, and the annual produce under common management, from 150 to 200 barrels of corn, and from 500 to 750 bushels of wheat. The buildings with repair may be made comfortable and sufficient, and there is a bank and ditch on the road side, with part post and rail, and part hedge; but a view of the place will best recommend it. The purchaser may probably be accommodated with negroes and stock as may suit him, and he may have a wheat crop of about 50 acres, sowed in corn ground, or not, as he pleases, with apple and other fruit trees for a young orchard.

Also, another FARM, on the other side of a creek, and branch from him, containing from 120 to 160 acres, as may be agreed for; on which is a good dwelling and other houses, garden, orchard, &c. divided very conveniently into three fields, which extend to the creek, the banks of which are very low, or rather level with them, so that the whole may be made valuable; for this purpose the purchaser may have a part of the said creek, with a fine marsh. At his choice a small crop of wheat and rye, and perhaps Negroes and Stock.

These Farms may be entered upon the first of January next at farthest. The titles are indisputable. A reasonable proportion of the purchase money must be paid down, and the residue in annual payments, bearing interest, with unexceptionable security.

BOSTON, September 22.

Wednesday next the general assembly of this commonwealth are to meet at the state-house in this town.

Extract of a letter from a gentleman of good intelligence in Europe, dated May 27, 1783.

"The definitive treaty of peace and that of commerce are going on; but when you consider the numerous claims to be adjusted between so many powers that have been contending, and the nice points to be settled in so complicated and extensive a commerce as these powers possess, you cannot wonder that a final decision should require time. The spirit of commerce seems to pervade the nations of Europe, and to form the complexion of the present age. Happily for mankind, this spirit, by opening a friendly intercourse between distant nations, and rendering them reciprocally dependent, enlarges and polishes the human mind; checks ferocity; abates bigotry; softens the rage of war; makes us citizens of the world, and surprisingly changes that self-interest from which it springs, into the means of promoting the benevolent affections, and the pleasures of human society. Many are now convinced that trade has been loaded with two many restrictions, and that in a time of war it has suffered more than it ought to have done. The powers that formed the armed neutrality appear to have adapted this idea, and are supposed to be desirous of making it part of the basis of a new general system. America, without doubt, wishes to trade with all the world upon the most liberal and extensive plan, and every nation would be glad to have as large a share as may be in the trade of America. But the sovereign, independent United States are a new object, very different from what they were in their former mode of existence as British colonies, which must necessarily create a new influence, and occasion new points to be discussed, respecting the general system of commerce. And when the separate interest of each nation, and the objects and modes of its present finance are closely considered, a plan for an extensive enlargement of the freedom of trade is, I can assure you, attended with more real difficulties than one would at first imagine. If some special indulgences are proposed for America, from any nation, the other European powers in commercial alliance with that nation, immediately expect similar indulgences for themselves and their dependencies abroad. At the time of signing the preliminaries, the court of London appeared disposed to grant the United States the most liberal terms of commerce, and a trade to the British islands with every former privilege of freight, &c.---For which purpose a bill was brought into parliament, but it met with objections of various kinds, principally from the supposed injury such a measure might induce to the interest of the British merchants, and to the revenues of the kingdom; and the subject was referred to commercial treaty, where the same objections are not forgotten. And yet it behoves no nation more to court the good will and commerce of the United States than that of Britain.

"With respect to France, a nation that has so essentially supported our independence, has given us every pledge of friendship, and whose interest it is, as a rival of Britain, to cultivate a commerce with us as far as possible, the difficulties attending a free trade from America to her islands are still stronger. The records of her revenues prove to a demonstration, that her West-India islands occasion an annual importation of money into the kingdom of France, to the amount of 80 millions of livres tournois This you must allow is an important object. The merchants of France stand ready to evidence that a free trade from America to those islands would not only essentially injure their own private interest, but greatly diminish in various ways this importation of money; and that should the present regulations and duties cease, the public revenue could never in any other way be brought near to the amount at which it now stands. I am moreover assured, that according to the treaties which France has entered into with other nations, an admission of the Americans to such a free trade, would necessitate her to grant the same admission to those nations. How impossible this must be, you may easily perceive. These, and other I have not mentioned, are the obstructions that lie in the way to an object which if attained, might prove advantageous not only to America but to the inhabitants of the West India islands. Indeed, by a special favour, his most christian majesty has given his consent to the admission of American flour in his islands upon French bottoms. Even this indulgence has been considered by many as unfriendly to the trade of France, and has occasioned particular complaints from the merchants of Bordeaux. The king, however, persists in the measure, and will not revoke the concession."

RICHMOND, (Virginia) September 27.

Extract of a letter from Washington county, dated August 10, 1783.

"We hear from good authority that various deputations have lately arrived at Louisville, they all express a hearty and ardent desire to be at peace; acknowledging their mistake for not observing a neutrality, and submissively beg our protection; some of them tell us, our troops are in possession of Detroit, and that commissioners from Congress had arrived at Sandusky. This is the real cause perhaps of their now so clearly seeing their error, notwithstanding this flattering prospect of peace presents itself, we are not a little alarmed at the rash and wicked conduct of a party of North-Carolina people, settled on the Cumberland or Shawanese river, joined by a body of the Chickisaws, attacking one of the Spanish settlements on the Mississipi; happily they were repulsed, and most of them fell a sacrifice to their villanous attempt. This unlucky affair we find was set on foot by some tories that had taken refuge in the Cumberland settlement, after the conquest of West-Florida; particularly one Turnbull and Phil. Alston (the famous money counterfeiter) but early intelligence of their infamous project was given by a Virginian who it does great honor to, to the Spanish governor; by which means, our friends were some what prepared to defend themselves: would to God the Spaniards had them: perhaps, they would gratify their thirst for gold by keeping them digging for it all their lives, as the governo demands that all those who have escaped be given up, or he will send a sufficient force to make reprisals."

She also saw another ship with her yards and topmasts struck, but did not speak with either of them.

FABIAN HAMERLY,

TAKES this method to inform the public, that he now occupies a shop in Elfrith's alley, near Second-street, where he carries on his business in the different branches of machinery, which he formerly learned in Europe, and has carried on the same in this country for these 8 years past, viz. first, making fire engines of all sorts and sizes; secondly, pumps of copper and lead, for the use of the brewers, distillers and sugar-boilers business; thirdly, engines to force the water out of any spring, well or pond, to convey it to any house or part in the house, or to any place wherever it is required to be led, even the distance of three or more miles; fourthly, he does invent fountains of all sorts for gentlemens gardens.

He also takes the liberty to recommend himself to gentlemen merchants, commanders and masters of vessels, for plumbing of houses and vessels, as he learned that business in London of the best workmen in that metropolis. He therefore flatters himself to give general satisfaction in said branch of mechanism to his customers.

He likewise begs leave to solicit the custom of the respective fire-companies in this city, and its liberties, and offers to serve them in keeping their fire engines in good repair, for the most reasonable prices possible, namely; first, he will examine each engine every three months; secondly, every six months he will take them to pieces entirely, and fix them up again; thirdly, after every fire that may happen, he will deliver the engine back to its respective repository, at his own cost and charges; fourthly, all repairs (except the air vesse) shall blow, or the branch pipe or gooseneck be lost, or the cistern be shattered, or the handles be broke, or the barrels be bursted) shall be done gratis; fifthly, he will always keep them clean, and well oiled.

I am, with due respect,
the public's most obedient humble servant,
